Various modes of public and private transit options, including buses, automobiles, bicycling, and walking, should be available and accommodated. These options help residents maintain mobility and independence, providing them opportunities to address their physical needs and retain social connections. Age-friendly communities have public transport systems that are accessible to all ages with features such as priority seating for older adults, voice announcements, and screens displaying real-time arrivals.

Recent and Upcoming Projects

South Bay Rapid Transit

SBR will provide new transit service from the Otay Mesa Port of Entry to downtown San Diego via eastern Chula Vista. Upon completion, it will include 11 stations and span a 21-mile route, connecting residents to employment and activity centers in downtown San Diego and the South Bay.
